

Kinds Of Dog Food

Dog food is prepared for the dogs and it consists of plants or animals ingredients. Dog food can be prepared at home and it is also manufactured at the commercial level. Most of the dog owners always care about the food of their dogs. They always keep on looking for the best diet for their dogs. The times have passed when dogs were given the leftovers and scraps to the dogs. Nowadays, dog food is of high quality, with essential additives and in properly packaged food. The commercial food for dog is prepared to provide maximum nutritional diet to the dogs.

The commercial dog food available is either in the dry form or in liquid canned form. The dry dog food is also known as kibble food. The liquid food has about 78% moisture level while the dry dog food has 6 to 10% moisture. Some dog food packages are also available in semi moist food, having 25 to 35% moisture. These different forms of food offer variety in the dog food therefore, dog owners can select the food according to the taste of their pets.

Dog owners usually go for the canned food for dog because these foods are nutritious and they are available at reasonable prices. Moreover, dog food can be conveniently served to the dogs. Most of the packaged or canned food is not spoiled for certain days therefore, after opening the pack, it can be used for some days. Some dog food selling companies have also introduced the other forms of food for dog.

Dog food is available in freeze dried form. This dog food comes in the raw or in cooked food but this food is not processed. The benefit of using this dog food is that it is more nutritious as compare to the other form of food because its nutritional integrity is not destructed. The second type of the food for dog is the dehydrated food which is available in the raw and cooked form. This dog food is similar to the dry dog food but it may need warm water addition before serving to the dog. The third type of alternative dog food is the fresh or refrigerated food which is manufactured by pasteurization of the fresh ingredients. This food for dog can be preserved for about 2 to 4 months.

Dog owners also prefer to serve homemade food to their dogs. These foods for dog are prepared by the people and they are sold in the market. This dog food is consumed by the pets immediately and it is not stored like the canned food.

Therefore, for providing the quality and diet and good treat to your dog, quality dog food should be selected. References Wellness dry dog food -

About the Author

Similar stuff about pedigree dog food coupons, try this link.

Source: <http://greatreads4.com>