

Hiring A Services Of A Social Security Lawyer

There are many reasons why hiring the services of a social security lawyer can be of great benefit. Many people who apply for Social Security disability benefits without the help of a social security lawyer will often have a difficult time with the process, putting even more burden on an already difficult situation. Since the application process for such benefits are often determined by a points system, a qualified social security lawyer can make things easier and simpler. A social security lawyer can help you with the different types of Social Security Disability benefits available and help you decide which one is the most appropriate to your situation. A social security lawyer will even be able to guide you through the qualification process. There are several benefits for disabled persons as provided by the Social Security System. The rules for each one can be quite complicated, which is why hiring a social security lawyer can be helpful. A social security lawyer will be able to tell you the differences between each one and which will best suit your needs. This article will go into detail about two types of benefits in particular; Social Security Disability Insurance or SSDI, and Supplemental Security Income or SSI. Your eligibility of SSDI is dependent on your work history and disability, while SSI takes into consideration disability, as well as your income, old age or blindness.

Your social security lawyer can help you apply for SSDI if your Social Security fees are paid, and you are suffering from a physical or mental condition that prevents you from working. You are also eligible for the program if you have been disabled for 12 months, you expect to be disabled for the same period, or if death is a possible result of your condition. Since you are eligible for the program if you expect to be disabled for a 12 month period, you do not have to wait that long before filing for benefits. In some cases, you may receive overpayment from the Social Security office. Again a social security lawyer can help you with this situation, especially if the error lies with the Social Security Administration and you are asked to pay back the overpaid amount, in which case you may want to file for a waiver. The social security lawyer can also stand in for you if you have to face a court appeal that will decide on whether you have to pay back the excess amount or not.
