

How Often Should You Get Your Car Waxed?

Any man will tell you that you should keep your car waxed. If you ask one, you know that yes is going to be his answer to that question. If you are a woman though, and have no man around to help you do things like that, you really should learn about waxing your car and how to use car wax. You can wax it yourself and keep it looking shiny and keep it protected too.

Car wax not only puts a pretty sheen on your car but it protects the finish from things in the environment that can ruin it. Did you ever see a car that was old and all faded out? If it had been kept up with car wax, it would have kept its original shiny finish. When your car is not protected, the sun and oxygen can cause the paint to oxidize and fade.

So what is the deal on car wax? Is it the same as polish? Use some caution when you purchase your car wax. Polish is not the same thing as car wax. Polish has an abrasive in it that can damage your car if you do not follow up with car wax. To get really good results, you should both polish your car and use car wax on it. Some products on the market have both a polish and a car wax in them. Some experts say that you should really do them separately though.

Using car wax on your car will keep it looking good and protect your investment. Car wax will also make your car stay cleaner longer and make it really easy to wash it. If your car has a good coat of wax on it, the dirt and bugs will not stick to it as easily.

You can use car wax at home because it is so easy to use. Some people use car wax on their car very often, others will use it about every six months and others will wait and wax it yearly. The better the brand of car wax you use, the less often you will have to wax it. If you prefer not to do it yourself, there are local auto detailers that can do it for you. Auto detailers usually use a really good brand of car wax. Just remember, you should have it done on a regular basis.
